TECHNICAL NOTES

Conversation-specific knowledge extracted from the fishing after storms discussion.

EDITORIAL NOTE

This was a reply to a particular radar image. That image and its observation time are absent, so its location comments and “probably good” conclusion cannot describe conditions now.

CONVERSATION / QUESTION AND CONTEXT

This storm is moving out to the east im the blue dot is it safe to go fishing

CONVERSATION / EXTRACTED GUIDANCE

1. The main heavy line (red/yellow) is already east of you (Lawrence/Ottawa) - that's good.
2. You're in a lighter green zone, which usually means light rain or drizzle.
3. BUT there's still scattered rain wrapping around, and more importantly, storms just passed - so conditions can still be unstable.
4. Lightning - biggest risk. Even after the main cell passes, lightning can still strike behind it.
5. Wind gusts - outflow winds can hit after storms and mess with the water.
6. Rising water/current - especially at spillways (you fish those a lot).
7. --
8. If you wait ~30-45 minutes after the last thunder/lightning, you're probably good.
